

	G	S	B	Total	Grade	The Straits Times' assessment
Muay thai	0	0	1	1	B	Another sport with only two athletes and one, Lena Tan, bagged a bronze.
Netball	0	1	0	1	B+	With only a third of the team having Games experience, it was always a tall order to dethrone Malaysia in the final.
Open-water swimming	0	0	0	0	C+	This is the first time the athletes have not won a medal in the past three editions that the sport has featured in.
Rugby 7s	0	0	0	0	C	After two silvers in 2017, this time the men lost the bronze play-off to Thailand, while the women finished fifth out of six teams and won only once in the round robin.
Sailing/windsurfing	1	5	0	6	B	Ryan Lo retained his Laser Standard title. But to maintain the four-gold tally from 2017 was always going to be tough, given that most of the sailing classes were different.
Sambo	1	2	3	6	A	This was a competition to remember – walking away with one gold, two silvers and three bronzes in the sport's Games debut.
Sepak takraw	0	0	0	0	C	They were without a medal for a second consecutive Games.
Shooting	0	1	4	5	B-	With Olympic hopefuls and big guns like Jasmine Ser, Martina Veloso and Tessa Neo absent, the shooters fired golden blanks for the first time since 1991.
Silat	2	1	2	5	A	To be able to match 2017's two-gold haul despite the cut in events from 20 to nine is admirable. Singapore won their first team gold in an artistic event.
Skateboarding	0	0	0	0	B-	There were no medals, although Nur Farah Atika Abdullah came close in finishing fourth in the women's street category.
Softball	1	0	0	1	A	The men overcame the odds to beat regional powerhouses Philippines twice en route to a historic gold. The women were fourth out of five teams.
Squash	0	2	3	5	B	With the doubles events axed, it was always going to be tough to match the three golds from 2017. Still, they did well to clinch two silvers and three bronzes.
Surfing	0	0	0	0	B-	No medals but it was always going to be hard for an inexperienced team against giants Philippines and Indonesia.
Swimming	23	10	4	37	A+	A great performance with a record away gold haul of 23 that matched the best tally from Singapore 2015. The young guns did well as the squad won 60.5 per cent of the 38 titles.
Table tennis	2	3	2	7	B+	The doubles misadventures were mitigated by all-Singapore finals in the singles events, with 17-year-old Koen Pang's triumph a pleasant surprise.
Taekwondo	0	1	0	1	B	Ng Ming Wei's silver in the men's Under-58kg was the lone medal, an upgrade on a bronze from 2017.
Tennis	0	0	0	0	C	The quarter-finals were the furthest they went so it is a dip from the single bronze in 2017.
Traditional boat race	0	0	0	0	C+	While their target was two podium finishes, they knew it would be tough with competition from Thailand, Myanmar and Indonesia.
Triathlon/duathlon	0	2	0	2	B	It was the two young mixed-relay teams that shone with two silvers, with no medals in the individual events.
Underwater hockey	4	0	0	4	A+	The Philippines have a rich history in the sport so, for Singapore to pocket all four golds, is a breathtaking achievement.
Volleyball	0	0	0	0	C+	For the men's indoor team, there was no improvement from 2015 – three defeats in three. In the beach version, it went slightly better – the men made it to the bronze match while the women were last.
Wakeboard/waterski	0	0	1	1	B	Not as successful as previous campaigns but credit to 13-year-old Nur Alysha Rizwan who snagged their sole bronze.
Water polo	0	1	1	2	C	Not only did the men relinquish their 52-year grip on the gold, but they were also only good enough for the bronze in one of the biggest shocks. The women were beaten to gold – by Thailand.
Wrestling	0	0	3	3	B	An improved performance with three joint-bronzes.
Wushu	1	1	0	2	B	Their tally of one gold and one bronze pales in comparison to their haul in the past few Games.
